Customer Reviews

Exceptional photos and easy decodable accompanying text.looking at this maple and at all the live bustling around it helps children realize how everything change as seasons pass by. I would recommend it to any child aged 2 to 8!

I purchased this book for my son when he was in pre-K. It has beautiful vibrant pictures and the information is easy for children to understand the difference in the four seasons. My other son's, second grade teacher requested it from the parents to purchase as a classroom gift so it is appropriate for all pre-school thru early elementary.

The idea of this book is great. It is short and packed with photos. I think it does a good job of teaching kids about the changing seasons. I bought this for my 2 year old. However, she didn't really appreciate it until she was 3. Now she can skim through it herself. There are a bunch of these little science photo books that National Geographic puts out. I don't know if I would buy them again, now that you can get so many pictures on the internet, and of better quality. The photos here seem a bit dated, compared to what NatGeo now produces. Classic take on the four seasons. This book is lovely, but in a world of digital devices, I don't know if this book will stay a classic.

My wife is a school teacher and with all the cuts the school district is going thru, she bought this book to read it to her children and she told me that they love it.

All of these National Geographic books are great and you cannot go wrong for the price. They have beautiful photography and make learning come alive for kids. Both my five year old and seven year old love these books and we bring them out as the seasons change to help illustrate what is going on in our own back yard. Your child will not even know he/she is learning!

Gear book. The picture are great. They are easy for my baby to see. I love all of the books from National Geographic.

Stunning pictures and easy to understand information. Both my 2 and 5 yr old sons really enjoyed this book - so much so that they requested some of the other books by NG pictured on the back cover.

My baby loves nonfiction books with real pictures. She enjoys these books, and I love reading them to her. I learned something new in each of the books from this series!
